Six Community Meetings for People in Proving Ground Area

Putting First Things First

As an institution which works union men on an unorganized basis and which has always been rated fair in its relations with organized labor, it makes no difference to this newspaper whether construction of the Southwestern Proving Ground here is handled on a union or an unorganized labor basis. The only important thing is that labor be largely employed, and most of the money paid for labor be kept here.

FDR Asks 3 1/2 Billions More for the Navy

Raises Total of Two-Day Arms Request to 8 Billion Dollars

WASHINGTON —(P)— President Roosevelt Friday asked congress for $3,223,000,000 in cash and contract authorizations for the Navy and marine corps.

With a request Thursday for the Army, Friday's figures struck a two-day total of $8,093,000,000 for defense.

Included in the figure which Roosevelt sought for the navy in cash was $400,000,000 for maintenance and repair of defense installations in government and privately owned merchant ships.

Correspondents asked whether he meant that the merchant vessels would be armed, and Roosevelt assured that this was "not contemplated and that the bulk of the sum would probably be used for naval ships."

Deferring Men of 28 Likely

House Approves Revision of Original Draft Terms

By the Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The house cut sweeping strike control provisions out of the selective service act amendments Thursday and approved the remaining portion of the amendments, which provide that men who were 28 years of age or older on July 1 draft. Vote was 345 to 17.

The chamber eliminated, 218 to 151, a clause empowering the president to seize a plant whose owner or operator refused to make use of existing labor conciliation machinery to settle a strike.

It removed, 220 to 150, a clause granting authority for such seizure when production is stopped by subversive elements and forbidding any person to prevent by violence or threats any other person from going to work in a defense plant.

These clauses were inserted by the Military Affairs Committee and a fight for their retention was made by their author, Chairman May, (Dem., Ky.).

The action was not considered conclusive evidence of what the chamber would do with such legislation if presented separately.

A plea for removal of the labor clauses was made by members who usually espouse the cause of the unions, on the ground that legislation dealing with strikes should be presented on its own merits.

The legislation goes to a Senate-House committee for adjustment of differences between bills passed by the two bodies. The Senate measure would give the president discretionary power to defer men from the draft if they are 28 or older. The House bill requires such deferment. The Senate included a provision permitting the president to take over plants where there is an existing or threatened stoppage of defense production. The House bill now has no references to strikes.

88 Notices of Abandonment Issued by U. S.

County Relocation Committee Meeting With Community Groups

A series of six more community meetings to ascertain the needs of people who must remove from the Southwestern Proving Ground area was announced Friday by the County Relocation Committee.

The initial meeting, for people in the southern end of the reservation, where the permanent structures on the Proving Ground will be located, was held Thursday afternoon at the grove on the Lee Garland farm, Blevins-Hope highway. Ninety-seven persons were interviewed and listed at that meeting, Committee Chairman Oliver L. Adams announced.

The next six community meetings are listed in the adjoining column.

Purpose of these community interviews, the committee explained, is to list all persons actually residing in the Proving Ground reservation and who will have to find new homes, determine their temporary and permanent needs, and also determine how far public agencies can go in helping them.

Notices giving the first group of property owners and tenants two weeks in which to leave the reservation were sent Thursday to 88 persons by the construction quartermaster of the Proving Ground, Major Werner C. Strecker.

Evacuation deadline for this first group would be July 24.

Text of the government's notice follows:

War Department
Office of the Constructing Quartermaster
Southwestern Proving Ground
Hope, Arkansas
July 10, 1941.

SUBJECT: Abandonment of Property
Mr. John Doe
Hope, Ark.

You are hereby directed to vacate the property in the reservation of the Southwestern Proving Ground not later than two weeks from the date appearing at the top of this letter.

This vacating order will include all tenants, share-croppers, and any other persons occupying your property. This order is issued in order that the construction work on the Southwestern Proving Ground may proceed without delay.

What the Seas Mean to the Earth

Of the whole surface of the earth, more than 70 per cent is water; less than 30 per cent is land.

The oceans of the world are its greatest highways. On them, above them, under their surface, move the bulk of the world's vital commerce.

We of the United States, who happen to inhabit one of the greatest and choicest of the world's land masses, often think we are more or less independent of the sea. To Britain, to Scandinavia, to Chile, the sea is the breath of national life. So it was to us in the early days when we were a narrow ribbon of colonies along the Atlantic coast. During the hundred years when we were absorbed in developing the west, we thought little of the sea. Then, as the present century dawned, we began to realize that all our vital continent was but an island surrounded by the encompassing sea.

The great struggle of 1914-1918 was in one very important sense, a struggle for control of the sea. With such control in British hands, we felt at least that it was in hands unlikely to oppose our own aims and interests. We saw to it that it remained that way.

Now again control of the sea, present and future, is being contested on a broad scale, with a new element entering—control of the air above the sea. No longer is there any sea control without control of the air above it.

The United States now has every reason to believe that it has the greatest navy in the world. With the new bases in the Atlantic and Pacific, when they are completed and equipped with air strength, we should be in an effective defensive position against any single nation.

Unfortunately the world has gone beyond that, for a new technique has sprung up, of international coalitions linked by common governmental ideals as well as interests. A coalition of Germany, Italy, France, Japan, and a host of smaller conquered nations is more than a possibility.

Against such a coalition, no country, not even the United States, can build sea power that will guarantee security. That is why such a coalition must not be allowed to develop.

And that is why the "after-the-way" problem must include some sort of a solution providing that the seas, common property of all the peoples of the world, must be free.

300 Army Men in Prescott

110th Engineer Battalion Sets Up Camp in Park

PRESCOTT—The First Battalion of the 110th Engineers, composed of approximately 300 men, moved into Prescott complying with orders to be stationed here to make preparations for the army maneuvers slated for this section in August. The convoy of 41 trucks and two ambulances arrived here from Camp Robinson about noon Thursday and headquarters have been set up in the City Park. Heavy equipment for the unit will arrive later.

The Engineers, a part of a Kansas City, Missouri, regiment, and one of the older units of the Army, is under command of Major James P. Hall of Lexington, Mo., Attached to the unit for its stay here is a detachment from headquarters and service units and a medical attachment.

The heavy equipment expected will include air compressors, augers, tractors, road graders, etc. A water purification unit and a mobile motor repair shop will also be attached.

According to Maj. Hall, his troops will be stationed here until the opening of the maneuvers on August 17 and their work will consist chiefly of road and bridge reconnaissance, road and bridge maintenance, location of water points and construction of portable warehouses.

The commanding officer, upon inspection of the City Park, expressed himself as being very pleased with the preliminary arrangements that had been made for his unit and deemed the park a fine bivouac area.

21 Americans Released
WASHINGTON —(P)— Under-secretary of State Sumner Wells announced Friday by German authorities that 21 American survivors of the Egyptian ship Zamzam had been released and were enroute home via Lisbon.

Negotiation is still going on for the release of two others.

3 Nazi Ships Blasted
NEW YORK —(P)— Three German ships in a convoy from Finland to Germany were blasted to pieces Thursday by mines near the island of Oetland, off Sweden, and more than 600 men were thrown into the sea, the American-Swedish news exchange said Friday.

U. S. Workers in North Ireland

But Are Said to Be Employes of British Government

WASHINGTON —(P)— Secretary Knox and Admiral Stark Friday voiced what committee members called "categorical denials" before the senate naval committee that the American navy was engaged in combat.

The Secretary and the Chief of the navy were reported to have denied line-by-line demands made in a resolution by Sen. Wheeler to know whether the Navy had engaged in a "shooting war."

Shortly before Knox left the committee room President Roosevelt said it would not surprise him if American steel had gone into 50 British bases and if American workmen all over the world were being paid by the British government.

"And that is perfectly legal," he said.

Paid by British
BELFAST —(P)— Technicians and workers from the United States are engaged on construction projects of an undisclosed nature in northern Ireland. (Ulster)

(In London the foreign office said these Americans were "direct employees of the British government and asserted that reports that the U. S. is establishing bases in Ireland are not borne out by information in London.")

The people of northern Ireland which is sharing in Britain's war against Germany have given many evidences of the popularity of the popularity of the Americans, it was said.

Snow to Rain
Moisture content of snow varies considerably, but the average requirement is 10 to 12 inches of snow for an inch of water.

British Bomb Naples
ROME —(P)— British planes bombed Naples Thursday night, the second in a row, an Italian communique announced Friday, and "caused much damage to civilian houses."

Fifteen persons were reported killed and 20 injured in the raid which lasted nearly three hours.

German Cities Bombed
LONDON —(P)— British bombers Thursday night attacked Cologne and other targets in the German Rhineland and blasted at Ostend, Calais and Boulogne on the Nazi-occupied coast, the air ministry announced Friday.

Bad weather over the continent interfered with the raids and many observation difficulties but several fires were reported started at several points.

Britain acknowledged that two planes had failed to return.

Ship Depart from Beirut
JERUSALEM, Palestine —(P)— Departure of ships from the harbor of Beirut was believed by British forces in Syria Friday to indicate that Vichy French forces were withdrawing from the city.

21 Americans Released
WASHINGTON —(P)— Under-secretary of State Sumner Wells announced Friday by German authorities that 21 American survivors of the Egyptian ship Zamzam had been released and were enroute home via Lisbon.

Negotiation is still going on for the release of two others.

Saenger Is to Be Remodeled

Saenger and Rialto to Operate Continuously

A $10,000 remodeling and repainting job for the Saenger theater was announced Friday by M. S. McCord, secretary-treasurer of Malco Theaters, Inc., the work to begin in about two weeks, and requiring four weeks for completion.

Both the Saenger and Rialto theaters will go into continuous daily operation beginning Sunday, July 13, it was announced by Remmel Young, manager of the houses.

M. S. McCord

Contract for the Saenger remodeling job is held by Harold Gustin. The job calls for tearing down the present marquee and electric sign and replacing them with new fluorescent entrance lighting and a new neon theater sign.

The Saenger will be painted throughout, both exterior and interior.

There will be new drapes on the main floor and the mezzanine lounge, new light fixtures on the main floor, venetian-blinds in the foyer, and new stage sets. Acoustic material placed on the walls when the Saenger was adapted to sound movies will be given a new covering.

The Saenger is the largest exclusively theater building in Arkansas, the Rialto is a modern new small house, and remodeling of the Saenger will give Hope two modern amusement houses.

Pesky Shower Was a Blessing
DELMAR, Del. —(P)— Delmar firemen, roaring off to put out an automobile fire, cursed the heavy rain. It was coming down so hard that the driver couldn't see from his unprotected seat.

They abandoned the truck, jumped into a private automobile, and arrived to find the rain had put out the auto fire, too.

Germans Admit Their Drive in Russia Stopped

Reports Say Germans Are Risking Everything on Second Thrust

By the Associated Press
Adolf Hitler's invasion armies driving into Russia from the Bialystok-Minsk sectors have come to a complete standstill in several places, the official German news agency admitted Friday.

At the same time a reliable source in London said that a mighty new German offensive to crush the Red army was now underway and its success or failure, the observer said, may determine the outcome of the German-Russian conflict.

DNB, official German news agency, attributed the halt to the necessity of clearing roads which were said to be littered with Red army machines.

According to previous Vichy reports the German juggernaut has been stalled for more than a week, and there was noted a sharp contrast to the Nazi hurricane sweep through the lowlands into France last summer.

DNB asserted the halt was a brief one and said the roads were clogged with a mass of abandoned, shot to pieces, and burned out Russian tanks.

"Part of the immense amount of the communiques said."

For the fourth straight day Adolf Hitler's high command made no claim to gains on the front.

Meanwhile the Russians indicated that the sting had been taken out of the Nazi blitz and that German legions were no longer attacking.

In Berlin authoritative military commentators put Soviet losses at one million killed and captured—the same figure given by the Russians last Monday as to German losses.

Russian casualties, the sources said, were to be compared only with the slaughter of the greatest battles of the World War.

Proposal Studied
VICHY —(P)— Advances from Syria Friday reported heavy fighting going on in the French mandate while the French government studied the British armistice terms, which were received Thursday night.

Informed quarters said the French reply would be delivered as quickly as possible and Britain's proposal was sent at once to the French high command, Henri Dentz, who requested the cessation of hostilities.

A heavy British attack on the French line south of Beirut was said to have been launched Thursday and the latest dispatches said fighting was still raging.

Communications from Syria have been slow. The French, however, said they were holding out against the assault and reported shooting down four British planes and damaging another at a cost of only one plane.

Suspicious Women Are Examined by the Department
Several women have been picked up here in the past few days by state, county and local police on suspicion and turned over to the state health department offices in the Hempstead county courthouse for examination for venereal diseases. The women are held in jail pending outcome of the tests.

The state health department, working in conjunction with the local health authorities, Drs. Don Smith and J. G. Martindale in connection with the Army maneuvers examined all women brought to them and when venereal diseases are found to exist quarantine them until the disease is cured.

During the quarantine period the women are given special medical care. The state health department established offices in the courthouse last Monday and has been carrying out examinations since that time. The office personnel follows:

Dr. K. T. Mosley, medical director for the whole maneuver area.

Dr. R. E. Weddington, medical director for Hempstead and Nevada counties and who has charge of the venereal disease examinations.

George Shanlin, Sanitary engineer.

S. L. Davies, Sanitary engineer for the whole maneuver area.

Miss Gertrude Craddock, consultant nurse for the maneuver area.

The state health workers highly commended the local health department and especially the consideration given them by the three police departments.

The state department previously warned that prostitutes generally follow army maneuvers and local police said every effort will be made to discourage them in this area during the war games.

Picnic Dainties Are Bruin's Ruin
GATLINBURG, Tenn. —(P)— "If you feed the bears they may starve to death."

This unique warning to tourists in the Great Smoky Mountains by park rangers carries this explanation:

"Should the bear eat the picnicers' sweets and dainties, the chances are he won't continue to eat roots, berries and other necessary ingredients. So when Mr. Bear curls up for his long winter nap, he'll starve before awakening because he failed to store up the proper vitamins."

There's another reason why tourists should avoid the black bear. His claws are long and sharp and when food gives out, the bear smacks the first thing within reach.

Union Issue Is Raised as to Proving Ground

15 Hope Carpenters Charge Texarkana Making '$50 Assessment'

Fifteen Hope carpenters charged in a statement to The Star Friday that they had been blocked in an attempt to organize a local lodge of the A. F. of L. Carpenters & Joiners Union because the Texarkana local planned to hold jurisdiction over the Southwestern Proving Ground area and collect "$50 initiation fee from every new member."

Monte Allen, spokesman for the Hope group, said they wanted either a local union or an open-shop arrangement, and charged that the Texarkana union agents had come on the local scene solely for the purpose of collecting initiation fees from workers on the Hempstead county government project, despite the fact that Bowie county, Texas, has a 45-million-dollar shell-loading project of its own.

Mr. Allen said if the outside agents were successful in their attempt, to collect $50 per worker on an estimated total of 2,000 men it would take $100,000 out of this section.

Local carpenters, it developed, had a meeting here last Saturday night, at which time, they said, Albert L. Johnson and Rogers Williams, living here but holding cards with the Texarkana local, endeavored to represent the Texas union in a recruiting drive here.

Need Only 15 to Organize
Mr. Allen said there was resentment, however, because any town with as many as 15 carpenters may organize its own local, and Hope, with many more than that, had 15 signatures and $15 cash with the national organization at Indianapolis, Ind., on June 25. Nothing more was heard from the application for charter, but at the meeting last Saturday night, and subsequently through this week, it developed that Texarkana claimed jurisdiction here and was blocking the granting of charter, Mr. Allen declared.

Feeling grew this week, leading to a newspaper statement Friday by Mr. Allen and his group. The names of the 15 local men are:

The group said they had a local union three years ago, and would have obtained a new charter this time immediately but for the fact that a vast government project is about to begin here and the Texarkana union "saw a chance to clean up for itself."

A. B. Osburn, one of the local men, said the sentiment here was: "Pull for Hope, or pull out!" He declared the local men if blocked from organizing their own Hope union would demand an open shop, feeling that to be placed under management of the Texarkana group would bring up seniority and other questions which invariably would be decided in favor of Texarkana labor and against Hope labor.

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Williams, said to be acting for the Texarkana union, were not available for statements Friday, but their side will be published as soon as contacted.

Pottery Uncertain
This bringing up of the unionization question with regard to labor on the Southwestern Proving Ground was met with official silence Friday.

Senator Lloyd Spencer, who returned home suddenly from Washington early Friday, was said to be contacting the Calhoun Construction company for a statement as to labor policy.

The commandant of the Proving Ground is not in the labor picture, as construction work is a civil rather than an Army

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
Religion, Patriotism Too Often Used By Persons Promoting Selfish Ends
Text: Acts 19:8-10, 23-32

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

We have been reading about the spread of Christianity to Europe. In this lesson we return to consider its expansion in Asia. It is the quality of Christianity that the more it expands, the stronger it becomes where it has already taken root.

Ephesus, noted for the worship of the goddess Diana, became a centering point for Christianity's growth in Asia Minor as Paul made that city his headquarters for more than two years. This ancient city, a flourishing seaport in that day, is an instance of the havoc that time and change have wrought. It is in ruins today, with little to mark its former grandeur.

Christianity made such progress in the city that the worshippers of Diana became alarmed. The alarm particularly concerned those who were making a commercial business out of religion. There were silversmiths in the city, headed by a man named Demetrius, who had a profitable business making silver shrines for the worship of Diana. When they saw their business endangered by Paul's preaching, they became aroused and began to stir up a movement against

'Buck Privates'
Return Here
Abbot, Costello
Star in Rialto's
Sunday Feature

If the international situation has you troubled, if your rheumatism has you down, just forget your cares and worries and try a little boogie-woogie. It's a cure-all for the blues. That's the prescription of The Andrews Sisters, who have made boogie-woogie what it is today—just about a national institution.

In Current Comedy
Starting Sunday at the Rialto Theater with Abbott and Costello in Universal's "Buck Privates," the Andrews, Maxene, LeVerne and Patty, are the girls who first sang "Rumbogie," "Beat Me, Mendly, Eight to the Bar," "Scrub Me, Mommy With a Boogie Beat," and a half-dozen others that have topped the half-million mark. They say

"Everybody goes for boogie woogie. They can't help it. All you've got to do is hear it, and your feet won't let you keep still. Once you've got the rhythm, boogie-woogie does the rest."

There's nothing new about the kind of music that the Andrews sisters sing. Nobody seems to know for certain, but it's supposed to have originated about 100 years ago, down in the deep south.

Heard at House-Warnings
There the colored folk used to have house-warnings, each of the guests bringing his contribution to the party. The musicians brought their talent, but they seldom had pianos, so the basic rhythm was that of the bass or drums, eight beats to the bar.

And just as symphony has its Stokowski, boogie-woogie has its maestro, including such picturesque gentlemen of color as "Pinetop" Smith, late of Chicago, "Crippled" Clarence and "Jellyroll" Martin.

But it never really hit its stride and became a world-wide vogue until the Andrews sisters sang "Well Allright" a few years ago.

Paul and his Christian associates. These craftsmen could not have had much success if they had said to the public, "These men are endangering our business." Their self-interest would have been made altogether too apparent, but they aroused the great cry that the worship of Diana was being endangered, and they stirred up mob violence with the rallying slogan, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

How true is this to every age! Consider the profiteers from every form of commercialism, be it worthy and legitimate or some unworthy and vicious thing. When profits are endangered those whose interests are affected almost always hide behind some pretense of principle or conviction. It may be a plea of personal liberty; it may be patriotism; it may be some form of religious profession or prejudice—but examine closely, and you will find self-interest at the heart of the thing.

Fortunately, it has not always been so. There have been great occasions in history when individuals and groups have been able to rise above self-interest, and see issues in terms of social and moral reality.

It is these who manifest the spirit of true religion. A man's religion ceases to be worthy the moment his motive to make a profit from his faith becomes paramount.

One cannot forbear a word of application to our present crisis when some men either voluntarily or under compulsion are giving everything for their country while others are taking advantage of the situation for their own ends.

Let us beware lest the noble ideal of patriotism be tarnished by those who say "our country" when they mean "ourselves." There is nothing finer than saying "our country" or "our religion" when we mean it and our devotion matches our profession.

Blitz Teaches Neighborliness

Evacuated City Folks Learn Ways of Rustic Hosts

By ROSSETTE HARGROVE

NEA Service Staff Correspondent LONDON

When King George VI and Queen Elizabeth moved into Buckingham Palace when they were bombed out of their historic home, he was only doing what countless hundreds of his loyal subjects have been doing ever since the Germans started their blitzkrieg.

British hospitality is no longer a matter of formal invitations which require getting out the best linen and silver. Friends and even strangers are put up for a night, a week, even longer, on the spot of the moment. Housewives don't and can't go into a tailspin because somebody has dropped in unexpectedly for dinner or a bed. They are learning to take things as they come and often wonder how they managed to complete this life so before the blitz.

This new hospitality is evident on a grand, collective scale. Evacuation from urban areas is becoming better organized, with country towns and villages in "safe areas" rapidly changing with the influx of city folk.

The mixing of country "hosts" and city "guests" has benefited both, and social amenities between the two are being encouraged by the government in the development of wartime social centers.

Evacuation for the less fortunate classes has been the one sore point, with mothers separated from their children, or families billeted on grudging householders. The lack of companionship, too, made matters worse. Literally hundreds of mothers returned to London and other large cities because of loneliness and lack of sympathy. Steps have been taken to remedy these important details, but officialdom is never fast-moving.

There is one shining exception, however. This is a center which took in 2500 mothers and children evacuated from London and Bristol. Situated in the west of England, the district covers an area of more than 110 miles of beautiful countryside. Even before the war, it had set up its civil defense committee, and when the Ministry of Health telephoned after that town had been outrageously bombed, the committee was able to reply with out hesitation: "We're ready to take another 800."

As big gardens were part of most of the mansions, one man was appointed Gardens Director, arranging working parties. And finally, when husbands home on leave from the forces come to visit their families, there are several small houses set aside here and there where the men can be alone with their wives.

For many who have never known anything better than the squalor, poverty and promiscuity of city slums, this particular spot takes on the aspect of Paradise. Health inspectors report tremendous improvements, too, in both parents' and children's health.

"Blood and Sand" Stars Tyrone Power at Saenger Sunday

Show Features Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth

Latest Hollywood Production Has Setting in Mexico City

With Hollywood planning good-will junkets to Mexico City, it is interesting to note that the biggest film expedition of all was a matter of necessity and not one of diplomacy. Although "20th Century-Fox" did not intend that its filming of "Blood and Sand" would eventually be a good-will tour, the very nature of its shooting schedule in and around the Mexican capital automatically added to the popularity of American films.

The choice of Vicente Blasco Ibanez' famous novel was a happy one, for the story's brilliant Spanish back-grounds necessitated this jaunt to Mexico City. In addition, the novel is full of the rich romance that film-goers unfailingly relish and at the same time provides the ideal stellar role for Tyrone Power. His first attempt at this sort of role was the recent "The Mark of Zorro," and it revealed an altogether new and ineffably exciting screen personality as well as a marked fitness for colorful and adventurous romantic characterizations.

Ideal Role for Tyrone

The contention that such roles were ideal for Tyrone was voiced by Director, Rouben Mamoulian, who mentioned "The Mark of Zorro," and when the results of the nation's box office were tabulated and it was found that they substantiated his claims, he was again assigned to direct Tyrone Power in this colorful film.

Heading the supporting cast of "Blood and Sand" which was produced in Technicolor by Darryl F. Zanuck are Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth. Linda portrays Tyrone's forgiving young wife, while the role of the siren was awarded to Rita Hayworth when extensive tests revealed that she, more than any other star, was the perfect "siren" type. In addition, one of the most outstanding supporting casts ever assembled included Nazimova, Anthony Quinn, J. Carrol Naish, John Carradine, Lynn Bari, Laird Cregar and Vicente Gomez.

With the cast gathered and the roles rehearsed, plans were made for the extended location trip to Mexico City where, among others, the realistic and breathtaking bullfight scenes of the film were to be shot.

Director Scouts Location

Mamoulian preceded the company of 300, which included Tyrone Power and other principals, to Mexico City, on a location-scouting trip.

This location jaunt marked the first time in seven years that a major studio troupe worked in the Mexican capital and high government officials gave them a gala reception.

"Mexico gave us the city," Mamoulian reported. "No town in the United States ever gave greater cooperation."

Besides this, the biggest fan club in the world, numbering 77,000 members, gave Tyrone a welcome such as is usually reserved only for visiting royalty. It was estimated that there were more than 10,000 members at the airport to greet the star and his lovely wife, Annabella, and to spare him the ordeal of signing thousands of autograph books, the club president declared a ban on such requests.

Mexican Actors Signed

Mamoulian signed up several of Mexico City's foremost actors for roles in the film, not to mention some 5,000 extras, as the picture includes some of the biggest mob scenes the screen has shown in years.

Easily the most interesting personality signed was Amillita, the world's foremost bullfighter, who turned movie actor for "Blood and Sand."

The highest paid entertainer in the Latin countries, earning $3,000 every time he appears, Amillita had turned down many previous film offers. The 20th Century-Fox studio arranged his schedule so that, when he returned to Hollywood with the company for supplementary scenes, he could shuttle back and forth between the cinema capital and Mexico City by plane, in order that he might keep his commitments in the bull ring.

Thirty thousand people, the biggest crowd ever to watch the filming of a movie scene, turned out in Mexico City's Plaza de Toros to see Tyrone Power play a matador.

To use a couple of bowling terms, we wish they would spare us some of these strikes.

Maternity Is No Beauty Bar

Mothers Are Ace Professional Models Now

By ALICIA HART

NEA Service Staff Writer

Time was when marriage very definitely put a woman on the shelf so far as a career was concerned. And, more often than not, having a baby spoiled her figure and made her look years older than her actual age.

All is different these days. Rarely does an employer object to having married women on his staff. Rare indeed is the girl who doesn't slim down rather quickly after having a baby. Thanks to modern science and medicine, even rarer is loss of hair or softening and decaying of teeth during the months before the child is born.

Indeed, so much has been learned about pre-natal care that having children doesn't deter even the top-ranking professional models from their careers. Proof that their figures are just as good after having babies is the fact that a good percentage of the models most in demand for fashion shows and for magazine cover photographs are mothers.

Return "Lover Than Ever"

"Most of the girls on our list come back to work within three months after their children are born," says Harry Canover, head of a flourishing model agency. "Needless to say, they come back with slim, trim figures; hair as pretty as ever; skin clear; eyes bright. Their doctors outline special diets and give directions for special exercises. I never worry about losing permanently an employee who leaves to have a baby. I know by now that she'll be back pretty soon, looking lovelier than ever."

Take Even More Pains With Their Appearance

"And don't think for a minute," Harry Canover continued, "that the models who marry don't double their efforts always to be well-groomed and smartly dressed. Keeping up appearances for a young husband as well as for the photographers who take their pictures makes them doubly appearance-conscious."

Besides, being just a trifle on the defensive about working-through-married makes them determined not to slide into shoddy habits of grooming. "I'll show the boss that marrying hasn't changed me for the worse," is their attitude. They seem to take even more pains with their appearance than they did before marriage."

Among the more famous models who have children is lovely Bettina Bole-gard, whose son is two. Miss Bole-gard is one of the topflight millinery models. Hardly a month goes by that she isn't on the cover of some famous magazine.

Other model mothers are Joan Christie, Margaret Lane, Carol Lorell, Dorothy Temple. Slim, tall and beautiful, these are among scores of New York's most popular models who are even prettier now than they were when they started modeling, according to Harry Canover—and he ought to know.

Youth Sips First Tea at Buckingham

ALAMOSA, Colo. —(AP)—The first cup of tea that Albert Struel of Alamosa ever drank was with King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain.

Struel, until recently a student pilot at Alamosa State Teachers College, enlisted in the R. A. F.

Writing to his mother, he reported that he and other R. A. F. pilots were invited to Buckingham palace. Each flyer shook hands with the king and queen and then had tea.

WE, THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILLETT

Houses, just like the women who run them, can take on a drab, middle-aged look.

They do whenever the woman of the house stops growing and keeping up with the times and trying out new, young ideas.

Walk into the house of a woman whose daughters are grown and away from home and you often find that, although all the furnishings are in, inconspicuous good taste and the quality of the linen, silver and china is the best, the spirit of the home is drab.

The taste of the woman of the house lapsed at about the time she was most interested in home-making—that is, when her family were all around her and she entertained at the drop of a hat.

Her house, still furnished in a manner that appealed to her 10 or 15 years ago, looks right to her today—because she hasn't kept up with new ideas.

She doesn't realize that every one of her decoration ideas is definitely middle-aged—so much so that it is rather depressing to a stranger to walk into the living room.

The extravagant use of color and light that all young home-makers are going in for today is missing. So are any gay, happy touches that show that a woman is still thinking about her house as a part of the present—not just something left to her out of the past.

It might be a good idea for every woman who admits to herself that she is middle-aged to go through her house room by room and compare it with the houses of younger, more active women.

If it inspires her to get some color into its drabness, and some life into its quietness, it will be time well spent.

For there is no reason why the

"Like old times, isn't it, Janet, having afternoon cocktails here together?"

Ken's voice.

A wry little smile twisted itself about Ann's mouth, and she swallowed a lump in her throat. Sally had been right. Ken was with Janet. Had he been coming every day? Had he been dining with her every night, when he told Ann he was working?

"Where are we going to dinner tonight, Janet? Coon's orchestra is playing at the Strathmore. We could dance together to the grandest music in the world. We used to have grand times together at the Strathmore."

"Before you became engaged to little, ladylike Ann. Don't forget, Ken, you are engaged."

"But not married, Janet, and there's many a slip—We can still dance together and dine together and no one can stop us."

Other words came to Ann, but they did not register on her stunned brain. She watched them leave the tearoom so interested in each other they did not notice her.

"He's double-crossing you, telling you he has to work at night when he's dining and driving with Janet."

That was what Sally had said. Sally had been right. A thousand things were leaping up to taunt her—Ken's scorn of her dancing, his wanting her to pretend to be something she wasn't, his arrogance, and now his unfaithfulness.

But suddenly she knew that it did not matter, because all at once, for no reason that she could understand, she did not care. She no longer wanted to be the lady—the sedate person he wanted her to be. She no longer wanted to fit into that background of aristocracy which meant so much to him. She wanted to dance. And more than anything else she wanted Jerry Lane with his sincerity and honesty.

She had called Jerry crude, but now she knew that real, rough quality in him was what she loved. There was no veneer about Jerry. He was just what he was and she loved him.

JERRY. She thought of him breathlessly, shining eyed.

She wanted to dance with him again to Jim Coon's orchestra. He had told her that when she called him he would come no matter when. She'd find out from Jim Coon if he was still in town. She couldn't get to the telephone fast enough.

At last . . . "Jerry." Her voice was high and shrill as she flung the words over the telephone to him. "Jerry, this is Lita. The veneer has cracked just as you said it would. Jim Coon's in town. He told me where to find you. And I want you to come to me tonight to dance with me."

"You've got to come. Get a plane. If I ever meant anything to you, you've got to come now . . ."

"You can't! But, Jerry . . ."

"Oh! You've got your call! You're ordered to report to camp tomorrow! But, Jerry, you must . . . I . . . I need you!"

It was a rainy, misty June night as Ann sped over the highway to the airport. She had scarcely parked the car when a plane was zooming overhead in the darkness. Then it was bumping over the ground and had stopped.

She ran forward, holding out welcoming hands to Jerry. She could scarcely wait for him to take her in his arms, to feel the warm, hungry pressure of his lips against hers. But he wasn't gathering her close.

Stunned, she realized that he was holding her hands in the same impersonal way that he would hold the hands of any girl he liked—that he wasn't going to kiss her at all. She no longer meant anything. The realization was like a lash cutting her.

The tears spilled over and trickled down her cheeks. She fumbled for her handkerchief.

"Why, Lita . . . what's the matter?" He was looking down at her in the dim light.

"Nothing." She swallowed a sob. "I guess I was just homesick to see you. It's silly of me to cry, isn't it? But it's just nerves. I've had a quarrel with Ken, only I haven't really. I'll explain. Anyway the effect is the same as far as the tears are concerned."

She heard him giving the pilot instructions. He would be flying back about midnight.

Midnight. The word was like a dart of pain through her heart.

"But you can't—so soon." She exclaimed sharply.

MISSOURI PACIFIC SEEKS YOUR PEACH TRAFFIC

ONCE again the Missouri Pacific seeks an opportunity to serve the peach growers and shippers of Arkansas. As in the past, it offers the advantages of fast, dependable rail service, and once again it pledges its fullest possible cooperation in every way possible.

Movement of Arkansas peaches by rail makes for the orderly and systematic marketing of the crop and for more stable and satisfactory prices.

The United States Department of Agriculture, through its Agricultural Market Service publishes each day information regarding the total number of cars of peaches on hand at various destinations. Through any Missouri Pacific Lines agent shippers can divert their cars when and as necessary, thus avoiding the glutting of markets and thereby helping maintain better market conditions.

Peaches shipped by rail travel in modern refrigerator cars. They reach the consumer, fresh and firm and in an attractive appetizing condition, thus helping maintain the reputation the Arkansas peach has so long enjoyed for quality.

Local forces of the Missouri Pacific Lines will be augmented throughout the shipping season to afford every possible service and convenience to shippers. For full information about fast schedules, rates and diversions, see, phone or write
